 Museum of the American Indian, Heye Foundation, 1922. Creator: Speck, Frank Gouldsmith. The Micmac were able to drive the Beothuk into the interior of the island. For the next 150 years the Beothuk basically kept to themselves. Due to their isolation, the Beothuk managed to avoid the epidemics that would later kill many North American Indians, but the Beothuk people were starving to death. The now extinct Beothuk lived in Newfoundland, while the Micmac occupied Nova Scotia, northeastern New Brunswick, Gaspé in Quebec, and Prince Edward Island. South-western New Brunswick and the neighboring part of Quebec was the home of the Malecite. The use of remotely piloted aerial system
